

The current format that XM radio provides "local traffic and weather" is available to all subscribers. This format of broadcast is no different than the weather channel providing the traffic and weather on-line; in the sense that, anyone can get the information just so long that they have the service, whether it be from a computer or a radio. Also, the current format of XM "local traffic and weather" is only on a select number of channels. If these channels are not tuned in, the local aspect is nonexistent.